MacDonnell for Mayor

HELLO!

Shop early. Vote early. Shop often. Vote often. Help! Fire! Police! Fire! Water! Bricks! Brimstones! You voters who have the honor to vote on Monday, use your brains—that is what the Lord gave you for that. The contest is being held every day. The Board of Trade were preparing for a big 'At Home' last night as we were going to do. The cameras were cutting. The salvers are shining. Vote early and vote for R. G. MacDonnell.

At the time the MacLeod Club were planning their club hall, there was a split in the orchestral circles of the town. So there you are.

Speaking about "going out of town for the day," I have waked up and done over recent statistics published. We think the public now know what this buying of town means and we are careful nursing on the part of the merchants and the papers, great many dollars may be lost in to-morrow's thing is certain. We've got to have the goods every day in the week before people will come to a satisfied state of mind and rest in confidence that they can supply their needs, town.

There is a new building not far from this office being erected and the plumbing, fittings, steam heating apparatus, etc., are being installed under the eye of the outside buyer. I understand that tenders were not called for on this job. It was simply let go out of town as far as we could without any offer to any of our local contractors, all of whom are capable of installing it.

The Buzzer was never started with the intention of righting all the wrongs of the town and people. Oh, no, not for the wife guy. We do hope to discuss things, ferret out little oddings, and "rub it in" when occasion requires. Light may be needed to bear upon things that would otherwise go unheeded.

Graft! Graft! who would ever think of graft in this western—everybody—ace-loving country?—but, I am sorry to say, there are still some who are educating the graft-light district of MacLeod. Who would. Oh, ye grafters! Just as soon as a fellow seeks to serve his country, he is apt to be called a traitor and a scoundrel. He has sent the word if he will do his best which was a stone brush.

Now, readers, can you wonder at people sending away for their goods when men behind the counters understand their trade so well? They will not care to serve in a drug grocery or hardware store. Everyone to their own trade. I am sorry to say there are still some clerks in the trade, but they have never learned the trade, and that is why in many cases you do not get what you order.

Board of Trade At Home

The Town Hall was artistically decorated last night and was filled by a large, enthusiastic and representative gathering. The Board of Trade were hosts to all who came to rejoice over the Spokane winnings. Mr. Grady introduced Prof. Fairfield of the Experimental Farm at Lethbridge, and Live Stock Commissioner Stevens, of Edmonton. These gentlemen spoke interestingly and convincingly. Other speakers were called including W. J. Glass, H. Mackintosh, and E. Maunsell, who won prizes at Spokane. Refreshments were served as we went to press.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

We are publishing two signed letters this week. Please sign your name when writing for publication, but for editor's own information, we take no responsibility for the following:

MacLeod, Dec. 5th, 1910.

Mr. Editor: I am the author of the article in this week's Buzzer—a merchant.

Well, you can blame the working man for sending out of town his good wife. Well, then, he was a working man, was asked the other day by a certain professional man what would I want a day to earn in his cellar?

I asked him how much, but he said that was too much. I said well, I have a wife and family to keep and your job would only last a day or two; I could not afford to pay her. Well, then, he said, my mind. I will wait until the spring and then the Japs will be around. They will do the job for $1.50 a day.

Now, this so-called gentle- man's salary is over $100 a month.

Now, reader, can you wonder why the Japs are coming here ahead. Simply because we have got to go to the cheapest market for our goods.

Yours truly,

Live and Let Live.

Mr. Editor: May I seek a little space in your valuable paper.

We are hearing every day about people sending east for their grain. Well, I guess one reason is they can get what they want there.

There are merchants in town who have men behind their counters who do not know their business.

Men of untidy appearance and wearing overalls. Rigmen are allowed to wait on you. When you ask for an article they either don't understand it or they don't even look at it. The other day I phoned to a store in town and ordered my goods, including a scrubbing brush. The goods arrived five hours later.

He had written on the bill of lading that he had sent the wrong size if I would do.

Now, readers, can you wonder at people sending away for their goods when men behind the counters understand their trade so well?

Don't Be a Johnny
A fellow has to hustle now
And do his daily chores,
And he's got to be careful how
He hangs around street doors.

The stage does a spiffy spot,
A risky place to lurk,
And you'll get caught a lot
If follows out of work.

The same is true from Maine to Cal.
And we have proofs to bring,
Just take a glance at Portugal—
It happened so.

Came to Raise the Wind
That was a factitious bishop who went to such a breakfast table and placed a short time ago in another disease.
The vicar being ill, a curate received the news, and said, "What does it mean?"
"What do you mean?" was the stern reply.
"Means, of course, that you are now not fit for the pulpit," said the curate.
"I am grieved that you should have to say such a thing."

But the youth found his grief misplaced
when he heard the man of the cloth say:

"But, tut, tut! Didn't I come to raise the wind?"

A Cure for Fever and Ague
A doctor, a stomach of fever and ague, strong remittent of the disease, open and determined of the quality of the blood. In these men, "Painful Vegetable" is a good remedy, also, when the fever and subduing the ague in a few days. There are many who are subject to fits of tertian fevers, and to these there is no better preparation preferable as a means of recovery.

GOOD MORNING,

M.R. DOLLAR BILL

Hats off to Mr. Dollar Bill. This morning this most desirable gentleman assumed a new and most important roll.

He walks with a majestic stride of importance unknown heretofore. He seems to have his power as never before, thanks to Mr. Dolbear and the Chicago Sales Co. They have turned the trick of giving Mr. Dollar Bill a double purchasing power. The big "Manufacturers demand their money Sale" will bring a wealth of savings to the pockets of the people.

Macleod's greatest sensation start-to-day and the big booming bargain guns are firing hot shot every moment of the day.

No feminine eye ever behold more potent argument than is presented in the flashing of our string of sensational prices all day long in stores. Dry Goods in every line of sports. Novelty wear. Furs. Stuffed animals all kinds are cut to the limit.

Men, the clothing price quakers are down—flat down, quality and quantity combined with prices that are tops to shrewd will hustle out our 20th Century and other high class suits. It is a bewildering rush. Hundreds of salesmen chase from and you could go in blind and not be disappointed.

Foot wear of all kinds, for all ages and both sexes will be cut to the bone. There is the largest and most complete shoe stock in the town. All kinds for all wearers, cold weather shoes, house shoes, dress shoes, in fact this will be the greatest show off in your history.

Sizing right, hot, right off the bat, will be our bargains. There will be no competition. We are going too strong for others to even catch up, let alone surpass us.

Its dollars to doughnuts that not a soul in this southern burg will be keyed up to the greatest excitement and excitement over this singular bargain event. Not once but often they will be convinced of the truthfulness of the advertising and the reality of the price cutting.

You'll have to hustle, especially on Christmas goods with which our store abounds. The buying will be overwhelming. It will be like a madhouse long enough for half the people that will want to snap them up.

We want every man from "Missouri" to come in the "show me" kind of man, and we can demonstrate the wonderful savings this sale offers.

Come one, come all. Something here for everybody. Don't forget this sale only lasts 13 days to Christmas Eve.

CANADA IS A NATION

STIRRING SPEECHES AT LONDON CANADIAN CLUB DINNER

Judge Grantham, on a Recent Visit to Canada, Expected to See a Complete and Perfect Nation—Lord Stratford Speaks of the Great Possibilities of Western Canada—Will be Immense Strength to Empire.

London.—Lord Stratford presided at the recent Canadian club dinner and made two handsome wins in the club.

In doing so he alluded to the fact that it took him six days to cross the time that it took sixty days to cross the Atlantic, and the few members that had been here before him old fashioned today. At that time the West, he said, sent one hundred million of bushels, which produce one million, and the only demand of the Canadians were exports from the northwest, and imports from the east, and British Columbia was the only place in the great mountains. He emphasized the point that the potentialities so great that some day Canada will be a prosperity as a mere bagatelle.

The toast to the Imperial Forces was proposed by Sir John Douglas and General Sir Percy Lake.

The latter said that he had reason to be satisfied with the Canadian militia. It is now possible, he stated, to make comparison of the militia of twenty years ago, ten years ago, and in the future it will have an immense undreamed of encroachment.

So long as it is willing to help the Empire there is no need to write contracts. However, he said, to see that His Majesty's commands would be valid throughout the Empire.

He closed with the words that the British drum can be heard at sunrise throughout the world.

The Dominion, he responded to Price Ellison, of British Columbia, who said that he was a Manitoba Liberal and an imperialist by adoption, Chamberlainist in choice, and much preferred to be called a Canadian, said that Canada wanted the Old Country to get a move on.

"We don't want to be told to do things, the United States, which made Britain its master, did not have its preferences for Great Britain had not been endorsed by all parties and preferential treatment."

The British Isles, he stated, dropped in Canada would need an exploration of the country to see if it doesn't realize that Canada would not have a population greater than the United States.

Mr. Ellison devoted the greater part of his remarks to Canadian politics and the Canadian party.

The toast to the Guests was responded to by Judge Grantham, who in a speech paid to Canada and said that

SHEARER REPEATS CHARGES

Says Mayor Evans, Chief McMichael and Magistrate McMichael Faithless

Winnipeg.—Dr. Shearer took the stand in a crowded council chamber before Justice Dr. Dr. Shearer admitted that he had lied in his statement in Winnipeg and his explanations had been fully justified by circumstances. He pointed out that he differed in each of the three Toronto papers, and after discussing the question of the shearer's conduct given the paragraphs in the Globe he stated that his interview therein exonerated him.

He further claimed that the evidence he had adduced justified his statement that the charges in vogue were strongly suggestive of graft, and that he had been faithful to his office in not revealing the secret of his conduct.

Winnipeg and other southern men held a special conference on Saturday, and all were given every latitude to stand on the stand, his evidence being direct.

Horse Thieves Kill and Burn Bodies of Fourteen Redskins in City of Idaho

Washington.—Fourteen Indians are reported to have been killed and their bodies, with those of their horses, buried in two ravines in Elk country, Nevada. The Indians were shot to death by a gang of horse thieves, who had taken refuge in the city of Idaho.

It is believed that they will be buried in the city of Idaho.

EXPENDITURES IN WEST

ESTIMATES FOR 1912 TABLED IN DOMINION HOUSE

The Estimates Provide for an Expenditure of $138,863,200 for the Year Ending March 31, 1912—Being a Heavy Increase Over the Estimates for the Current Year—Appropriations for the West.

Ottawa.—The main estimates covering the estimates of expenditure for the year ending March 31, 1912, were tabled in the house in the absence of Mr. Fielding by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, prime minister, and an expenditure of $138,863,200, an increase of $6,635,572 over the main estimate of 1911.

The products of the wheat crop, he said, were not yet known, but he added that the third reading of the bill was to be held on April 10.

It is believed that it will be used as the site of a proposed granite yard, but it is also possible that it may be erected another elevator in the first cost of this city on the south shore of Burrard inlet.

MALLORY'S READINESS.

Story of a Man Who Always Got What He Wanted.

By BERTHA TREVELYAN.

If it usually happened that Mallory got what he wanted in the world it was by no means due to chance. When he was a boy he used to go about the field over carefully, noting all the sain't points—the advantages and the disadvantages. Then with his feet up and a cigar between his lips he would sit down and consider the methods of securing the thing desired.

Having finally arrived at a decision as to the best course of action to pursue, he pursued it with an energy and a singlemindedness that were equal to no encouragement administered by fate. And the result was that, as life goes, Mallory was accounted lucky.

He was a handsome, vigorous man of fifty who had been in affairs making it necessary for him to spend a great many months in New York, a series of introduction secured him a room with the millionaire who sent him the friend who sent him to there.

The length of his upper lip was hidden under a short gray mustache, or Miss Foster would have known from the first that it was a lie. But she did once think his mind was set upon marriage.

The romance of his youth was a beautiful memory, a thing of pain and elusive as the scent of lavender. But he had been a widower for twenty years, having been left at thirty with over two children. As he sat in the great dim drawing room where everything was coquet of other days he recalled several things, the usual—such as the long, long, long fuses, but which made for boldness. He sighed with a sudden wistfulness, a pitiful sort of keeping with his height, breadth and bone.

In the midst of his reverie Miss Foster appeared, a delicate, sinuous little girl of fifteen, in the room in which she stood trained for a moment.

As he rose to greet her he wondered if she could have given her not that butch look, and the pained up-hill. Her smile, thought, was oddly like the smile of a suddenly wistful-looking person, with his height, breadth and bone.

With a businesslike air that set ungently on her she showed him the rooms that she and her mother, rented to eke out their small and uncertain income, had the day before found him in.

Often during the following months he would speak with her, the mother and daughter, noting with his dead amazement the latter's unnatural air of cheerlessness. She would forget all about him, and then, after a time, in a moment she would remember that she was no longer young, and she would come to him again, her careworn woe again, drawing her mantle of years ungraciously about her, as if she had been determined not to let him see her age and so had run out to meet it.

Her references, to him, to the lightness of life, if of life when nothing but the dogs of life were left, whom romances could not possibly touch, whose role was one of duty, too.

At first Mallory took her at her own estimate, concluding that she was an old maid, and that she had a right to appear in a gown of flimsy violet with her brown hair rising in a swirl above her face, and he looked at her with a faint smile.

She turned her head, and the surprise of her profuse fairade made him start. With a slightly delicate and youthful, with a small bright nose, and full-lipped mouth.

His speculative audience told him that she was a widow, and he asked if she were that. But by the way in which she was always putting forward her young years he concluded that she was still a young woman.

It was evident that she herself was too old a woman to be of interest to any man.

"Come along with the old regime," Mallory soliloquized, "and has probably considered herself an old lady ever since she emerged from her boudoir, having had to make this bachelor woman idea." And he smiled to himself.

"But I thought your children were grown?" he said, with a faint smile.

"They're ever twenty," he admitted boldly, "they are the very age at which young men still need the protection of a father." Father, you can wear an old Roman toga without hesitation," he said, with a faint smile.

He could see that she was awaking, and he wisely refrained from further persuasion, murmuring only, "Well, we'll bring her along."

"On the steps of her new home as the curtains dashed up the door burst open, and she appeared in a gown of flimsy violet with her brown hair rising in a swirl above her face, and he looked at her with a faint smile.

Then a nurse moved forward into the circle holding a bulky armful. "And this is my husband, Ralph," the girl explained as another young man stepped forward. "And this is James." James was a tall, thin, dark man with a large nose, and his hands were clasped in front of him.

"And this is my son, Eddie," he said nonchalantly, "I have tickets for the opera tomorrow night. Be good and come too."

There was a dash of surprise in her face that for one brief, fleeting moment said frankly that he might have taken leave of his senses. The next moment she had a look of fear, and it was apparent that she was casting about for some plausible excuse, she accepted.

When the time arrived she was disturbed by an uncomfortable consciousness that she had been a widow, and she felt that she was going to do something of a secret of quickly exchanged glances and half turned her back. All this Mallory divined, and he put forth every effort to make her forget herself to such good purpose that by the end of the evening she was holding his hand and chattering as unconsciously as Mrs. Grundy did not exist.

With this excellent beginning things went smoothly for awhile. Walks gave and dances followed, and apparently Miss Foster's fear of appearing "kitchish" stumbled.

The most remarkable feature of the evening was the fact that old maid, Marion Foster, was trying to catch Mr. Mallory, and was failing.

"Then of sudden all the old prim restraint returned to her nature. These contrasting intonations were reflected in every person must have seen through them.

As he was, he divined the meaning of it all—same idle word that had annoyed all her former suitoriness, and she was writing under it. She was writing under it, and was failing, noting all the silent points—the advantages and the disadvantages. Then with his feet up and a cigar between his lips he was laughing at the result of it.

"The lines of care were deepening in her face day by day, and his heart ached for her.

"I'm sorry for you, Alice," Peter said in a determined way as she was about to pass him in the last one with an usual brief greeting.

"Alice is a pretty name," he was saying, "but I can't bear it. There is no way in which I can help you."

"It's nothing," she protested, hasty, "at least, nothing much. There is an old saying, 'If a man is born to be a fool, he will be a fool.'

NO-STRIKE LAND.

Concerning the Ancient Guild of the Purbeck Mariners.

There is an industry carried on in Great Britain which is entirely free from strikes, lockouts, and labor disputes in general.

This remarkable state of affairs is due to the fact that the masters are the masters, and the masters are the industry.

The industry in which the corporation is engaged consists of quarrying the material found in the Isle of Purbeck, particularly Portland stone.

Nearly a hundred quarries are worked here in which used to be of great importance to the industry.

The industry belongs to the descendants of the Purbeck Mariners, who formed the guild.
